

The Gettysburg Address

Fred Eralist

The Gettysburg Address is perhaps the most famous of Abraham Lincoln's speeches. He made it on the site of the Battle of Gettysburg on November 19, 1863. It begins as follows:

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

The speech continues from there, but this snippet is enough to illustrate the behavior of the quote environment. The margin is increased on both sides, and the text is fully justified.
